Confidentiality & Mandated Reporting

Child abuse and neglect

California law requires specified professionals to report known or reasonably suspected child abuse or neglect to designated agencies under applicable reporting rules. The therapist does not conduct a law-enforcement investigation.

Elder and dependent adult abuse

California law also requires reports of certain known or suspected abuse or neglect of elders and dependent adults. Reporting rules depend on the circumstances and setting.

Safety concerns

If serious threats or imminent safety concerns arise, the therapist may take steps permitted or required by law to protect the client or others. Not every mention of suicidal thoughts or harm automatically results in a report to police or hospitalization; decisions depend on clinical and legal circumstances.

Privacy

Only information required or permitted by law will be shared. Other confidentiality protections continue to apply.
